

DES O'HAGAN

Sir,—I hope you are preserving the contributions of your Long Kesh correspondent, Des O'Hagan. I suppose a comparison with Solzhenitsyn is excessive, but I discern in O'Hagan the same masterly evocation of detail, the same human concern, and the same humorous eye in grim situations that contribute to the genius of the former writer.

At any rate, I would think that a collection of some kind of O'Hagan's prison journals would be one good thing that could be salvaged from Internment. —
Yours, etc.,

JOHN DILLON,

Drumnigh House,
Portmarnock,
Co. Dublin,